GSL (Group Scout Leader)

The website should be easy to maintain and with low risk of it being compromised.

Content should be simple to update.

The content of the website should be relevant and help promote volunteers and new members to join the group

Modern design, attractive

Liam is a busy man and juggles his home life, work and volunteering.

As GSL he oversees activities for the whole group and wants to reduce the workload where possible.

Section Leaders

Section leaders send emails to their parents about activities and programme.

Group updates from GSL via email/Facebook.

A restricted Facebook group keeps parents up to date with activities as they happen – such as at meetings and camp.

Stuart is a leader for Sea Scouts.

He wants to promote the section to gain additional volunteers and members.

He communicates with parents by email and face-to-face about upcoming meetings.

Parents

More likely to speak to leaders directly about what they need to know.

Website is not first place to get information.

Happy to get regular updates from leaders via email, Facebook.

Lindsay's son attends Sea Scouts.

She looks to the leaders for updates on what is going on in the group. She finds the emails from the leaders useful, and if she has any questions or concerns, she will approach the leader before or after meetings.

Potential New Member/Volunteer

Looking for information about Scout groups

Wants to find out more about what is available and who to talk to.

Faye is looking for a local club for her 6 year old.

She is looking local groups to join on the internet and wants to find out what is available.

Scout Association

Wants Scout Groups to follow brand and vision of the association.

Must be inclusive – work on a range of devices with content meeting Web Content Accessibility Guidelines (WCAG) Level AA.

The Scout Association overseas scouting in the UK.

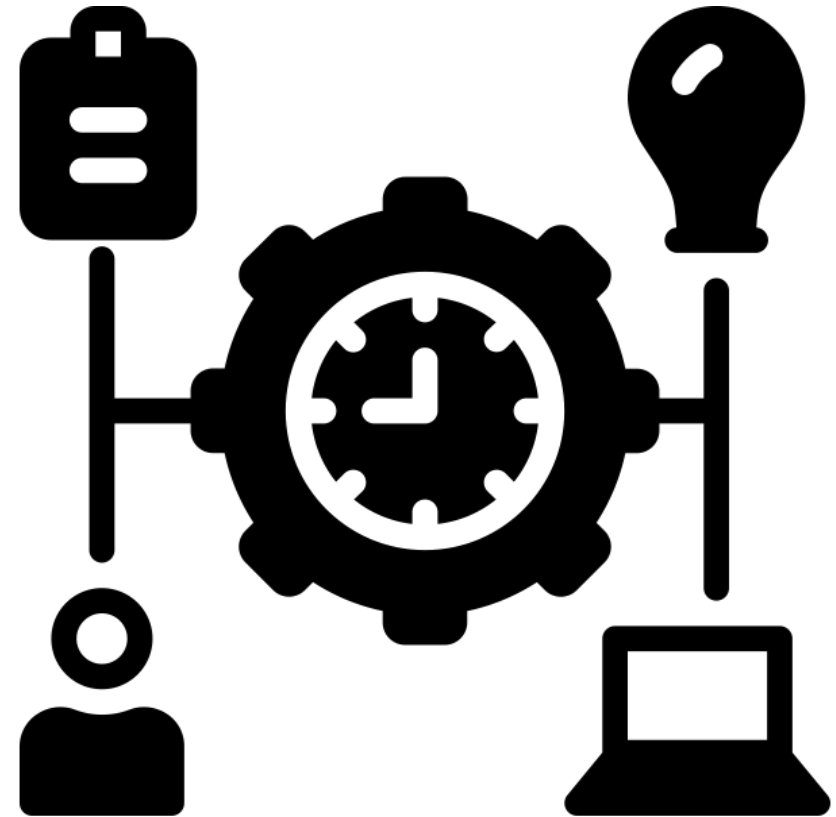

They promote Skills for Life in scouting and launched a new brand and vision in 2018.

It is important that the brand and vision is reflected in the groups.

Pioneer Design System

About Pioneer

Pioneer is a design system providing scouts groups an easy way to develop websites that promote the group, sections and other information.

It is designed with UK Scout Movement's brand in mind, which was launched in 2018, and will tie in with other promotional materials.
